

Can security and freedom co-exist in the digital age?

The Surveillance State: Big Data, Freedom and You

Wednesdays at 10:00 a.m.—11:30 a.m.

Starting February 7, 2018

Uncover the surveillance of our society and consider its impact on our privacy and civil liberties with the Great Courses DVD Series. Big data is here and that means the government and private industries are collecting massive amounts of data about each of us. In these revealing lectures, Professor Rosenzweig will scrutinize our system of oversight for intelligence agencies and the way the collected information impacts our civil liberties. The Surveillance State shows the challenging balance we confront between personal privacy and national security.

Series includes lectures and guest speakers. You need not attend all sessions to participate. DVD lectures will be repeated at the library each Saturday at 3:00 p.m. Coffee will be served. No registration required, all are welcome!
